Medicines benefit many of us but harm many others. A million people are admitted to hospital each year in the UK due to adverse drug reactions and more than 10,000 die. Yet new technologies are available to predict adverse reactions that current methods (chiefly animal tests) cannot predict.

We the undersigned call on the UK Government to mandate the best technologies available (with evidence of their predictive value) to improve the safety of medicines and reduce the tragic toll of adverse drug reactions.
